

North Dakota follows the federal CLIA regulations. A North Dakota laboratory must refer specimens for testing only to a CLIA certified laboratory. In order for an out of state reference laboratory to test specimens from North Dakota, the out of state laboratory must have the appropriate CLIA certificate. North Dakota does not license laboratories or laboratory directors. Facilities that only collect specimens do not need to be licensed or certified in our state.